GOULD BASKETBALL SQUAD TO RESUME PRACTICE MONDAY

Remainder of Schedule Complete, Big Double Header Here Jan. 15

Coach Anderson's Academy basketball squad will resume practice again Monday night after a two weeks vacation. The team has come along unexpectedly well, having won all three of their pre-holiday games. The big upset being the 22-18 victory over Norway.

The team beginning Monday will be to get the squad back into physical shape to meet the visitors, South Paris team on Friday, Jan. 8th. This game will be played at South Paris.

The big basketball event of the season which is now being planned is the double-header here Friday, Jan. 15, between Gould Academy vs. Gorham Normal and Bethel Independents vs. Rumford Shamrocks. If negotiations for both these games are completed it should prove the best drawing card of the season. Gorham Normal is especially strong this year and are eager to avenge a couple of defeats at the hands of Gould Academy in 1930. For the Bethel Independents against the Rumford Shamrocks will be seen some former Gould performers such as "Bob" Goddard, Parsons brothers, Saunders, and Hinkley. Coaches Myers and Anderson will probably be in the line-up also.

The Gould schedule is now complete with games as follows:

Fri., Jan. 8—at South Paris.

Fri., Jan. 15—Gorham Normal here.

Fri., Jan. 22—at Mexico.

Fri., Jan. 29—Rumford here.

Wed., Feb. 3—South Paris here.

Fri., Feb. 6—Atumal here.

Fri., Feb. 12—Mexico here.

Tues., Feb. 16—at Norway.

Fri., Feb. 19—at Gorham Normal.

Wed., March 2—at Rumford.

"SUMMER BUSINESS" LARGELY ESCAPES DEPRESSION EFFECTS

An editorial in the Boston Evening Transcript has the following to say about recreation in Maine: "Further evidence is at hand to show that the summer business is a New England industry which largely escapes the effects of depression. The State of Maine Publicity Bureau publishes figures comparing volume of traffic this year and last year. It has counted out-of-state cars hours as follows: through Longfellow Square to Portland between June 15 and Sept. 1 and finds there were this year 4,711 of them as compared with 3,745 last year.

"Plates on these cars represented 49 states and the District of Columbia, and in addition the Canadian provinces: Newfoundland, the Canal Zone, Porto Rico, and Cuba. Oregon was the leading American state. Massachusetts was most often represented in this procession of the motor cars past the statue of the poet in the Maine city. There were 18,951 cars with Massachusetts plates this year as compared with 16,682 last year.

Clearly one car from Texas came evidence that the motor tourist is not afraid of great distances. There were 1,400 from that distant state last year.

Statistics count back to indicate that there has been no diminution in the number of summer visitors. It does not, of course, fully tell the story of the state of the summer business. That involves consideration of the accounts spent by visitors, the length of their stay and other factors. Still there is ground for the assertion that the recreation industry accounts in large measure for the fact that Maine is applicable to other New England states. It goes without saying that a business which flourishes in hard times as well as in good is one of the most valuable assets that a state can have."

AMERICAN LEGION TO PRESENT MUSICAL COMEDY

George A. Mundt Post, American Legion, has completed arrangements for the staging of "Sixty Miles an Hour," a local talent musical comedy, at Odeon Hall on March 22 and 23.

The production will be presented by a cast of many local celebrities before a background of pretty girls, appearing in the most gorgeous costume array ever attempted locally.

As a special added attraction one hundred local kiddies will take part in a miniature wedding preceding the regular performance, which will be called "The Wedding of the Little Doll."

In presenting this double attraction the American Legion plan to interest the entire community in the project and in doing so to make it the outstanding theatrical event of the season.

Remember the dates, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 22-23, 1932.

Secretary of State Edgar C. Smith states that Maine plates of 1931 are legal in other states until March 1st with the exception of dealers and jitneys. It is necessary that your driver's license has been renewed in all cases.

OLD PICTURE OF BETHEL VILLAGE OWNED IN WISCONSIN

The following letter from a member of one of Bethel's old families was received last week. The picture referred to is doubtless similar to several now owned in town and should be of value to anyone interested in Bethel history.

1113 W. Johnson St. Madison, Wis. Dec. 22, '31

To the Editor:

I am a member of the Dr. O. M. Twitchell family that came from Bethel, Me. to Madison, many years ago. I have in my possession a framed picture about 16 in. by 18 in. of Bethel in 1875.

I wonder whether you or anyone interested in Bethel's past would care to purchase it.

It seems to be a wood-cut. Respectfully yours, H. TWITCHELL.

ARTHUR MELBURN BEAN

A TRIBUTE

The community pauses to pay respect to the passing of Arthur Melburn Bean on Dec. 26, 1931.

"Mel Bean" was born in Old Town, Maine, nearly 86 years ago, but considered himself a native of this town as his boyhood and declining years have been spent here and he was loving and loyal to Bethel.

At the age of 16 Mr. Bean enlisted in the 20th Maine Infantry of the Union Army and saw service for three years with Company C in the Civil War. He had active participation in the battles of the Wilderness and Gettysburg and at Cold Harbor received a bullet wound in the thigh. This injury was a source of pain and annoyance to him always.

Following the close of the War, he with many another brave youth of the time, went to the Western frontier and for ten years lived the adventurous life of the plains. Personal recollections of the Great Rebellion, the herds of buffalo, the Indians and the famous frontier characters of this era are fast becoming legend with the passing of each beloved landmark.

For about 20 years Mr. Bean was engaged in the wholesale jewelry business in Washington, D. C. and to the last enjoyed the contact of friendships formed in that bygone time.

Nearly 30 years ago he returned to Maine and in the old Bean homestead at Bethel he and his faithful wife of more than half a century, have enjoyed the esteem and affection of all their friends and neighbors.

Mr. Bean was a kindly and lovable character. He was a member of the G. A. R., a staunch Republican, and an ardent sportsman. The news of the nation was one of his main interests.

All children were attracted by his sincerity and charm, and he was never happier than when from his inexhaustible fund of reminiscence he told tales of another day for their entertainment.

His niece and nephew, Miss Eva Bean and Francis A. Bean, have looked upon him as a father, and he has bestowed on these, his brother's children, a great love and pride.

Miss Jennie Rich, a niece, has helped by her skill and affection to lighten the burden of the last carry. Fred B. Merrill and Miss Harriet Merrill have given constant comfort and companionship and from these two "Mel Bean" has received so much pleasure.

All of his neighbors and hosts of friends have tendered a fond affection that has never wavered during a long illness.

Funeral services were held at the home this Thursday afternoon at 1:30, attended by Rev. L. A. Edwards, Burial at the East Bethel cemetery.

"A noble life is not a blaze of sudden glory, but just an adding up of days in which good work is done."

OUR YESTERDAY!

A Contribution to The Citizen by D. S. Brooks, Bethel

Our theme sounds a little out of the ordinary, but we wish to consider the time that has already been lived in our lives as our Yesterday and join with this theme a personal question found in the Old Testament Book of Genesis the fourth chapter and the tenth verse: "What hast thou done?"

It is a powerful text with a deep significance spoken by Jehovah to Cain. No one can close his ears and declare that he has not heard this voice as it speaks to him in the closing hours of this old year. Had we time, we might dwell profitably on the text, but we are particularly anxious to speak about our yesterdays.

I well recall the "yesterday" of my boyhood days when my dear father observed in his ministry the watch-night as vice of the old year. How the people throughout the Parish would come to the Church vestry for the social sermon; and then, to enjoy a special hour planning for the welfare of the Church. Following this period of fellowship, there would be two short services of song, prayer, and testimony to the glory of God.

Such earnestness, I have not witnessed for many years. The spiritual life of the society was wonderful. There was a revival spirit all the time and a growth in numbers that would rejoice any pastor's heart. The hours of those watch-night services would go speedily and the tolling of the midnight bell would announce the coming of the New Year. Then the closing, by shaking hands and joyously singing the grand old Doxology and wishing one to other a Happy New Year before going home. Such blessed memories of the Yesterday of long ago!

O friends, if we close the old year in cheerful obedience and joyful worship to God, we need not fear how the New Year will find us.

A man cannot run away from his shadow, neither can he escape from his yesterday. We cannot go back to efface or obliterate the record of ninety-three years; but such as it is, we pursue us and refuse to be left behind. The gate into the new year of 1932 swings on its hinges, and we must pass through. We cannot avoid it if we would, we could not go back if we so desired. But the New Year's gate cannot shut out our yesterday. It is ours. It belongs to us. It is a part of us. Herein is the great significance of our individuality.

It must have seemed personal enough when God came to Cain in that early time with this last warning of the text, "What hast thou done?" and the further declaration, "The voice of the brother's hand cries out to me from the ground." But it is not so personal now. Our personality is not lost because of the multiplication of individuals. We are so many that we can only say that there is an unity of humankind which is more to illustrate and exalt the

Forgotten Heroes
By Elmo Watson
A Winner of the West
When the French and Indian war ended, it was decided that England should rule the North American continent. But there was still one factor to take into consideration before that rule should be established—the red man, traditional ally of the French. True the conspiracy of Pontiac had failed but he still "barred the way."
Six expeditions sent by the British to receive the surrender of the French posts in that country had been turned back—in some cases the envoys were stripped, beaten and threatened by drunken Indians. It looked as though the Englishman would have to fight again for what he had already won. Fortunately, however, General Gage, British commander in chief, heeded the recommendation of Col. Henry Bouquet, the victor at Muddy Run, that George Croghan, an English trader and Indian agent, be entrusted with the task of occupying the western country by negotiation.
No Gage supplied Croghan with more than $12,000 worth of gold, silver and presents for the tribes in the Illinois country and in January, 1763, he set out from Philadelphia in advance of his company of eighty pack horses. Soon after his arrival at Fort Pitt came the news that the usually fractious men of Pennsylvania had attacked his conveyance, seized all the presents, charged him with corrupt relations with the Indians and threatened his life if he ever returned. Undaunted by this, Croghan prepared new presents by giving his personal note for them and, accompanied by Delaware, Shawnee and Seneca chiefs and a few white men, he set out on his dangerous mission.
A month later his party was attacked by hostile Indians and all of his followers, except two white men and three Indians, were either killed or wounded. "I myself was twice hounded," wrote Croghan back to Philadelphia. "But my skull being pretty thick, the bullets would not enter, so you see a thick skull is of service on some occasions." Finally, after a series of mistreatments and forced marches in captivity, Croghan reached what is now Indiana and was finally set free. Pleading on into Illinois he at last was able to find Pontiac whom he won over by his diplomacy so that the great chief promised that he would no longer oppose British occupation of the West.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON
by REV. GEORGE HENRY

ABSOLUTE JUSTICE

We do not mean to teach that God is not merciful, but that he will judge impartially as between man and man. We may not all have the same chance in life, but we all have some chance. If your opportunity for service and your ability to serve is greater than mine, your responsibility is proportionately greater. I shall be called to account for the possibilities of life in relation to my mental and physical strength. The giant and the pigmy may each do his duty though they may not be able to perform the same task. Don't measure another man by the standard you set for yourself. Leave your judgment to Him who knows the secrets of all hearts, the things that are hidden from the eyes of men; who will take into account the accident of birth, the blight of heredity, and the curse of environment.

Big Reduction on Stamped Goods and Embroideries

L. M. STEARNS

You who have followed the history of Bethel and other localities nearby in the Citizen the past year will realize the value of the paper to all who would keep in touch with folks around here. The coming year should be equally interesting and the Citizen will tell the story. In addition to the news from our many correspondents the Citizen has a dozen other features of interest that add much to its columns.

Why not send the Citizen to a friend or neighbor the coming year? Especially if you lend them your copy—or mail it to them—it will be better for all concerned.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1931

A report of the United States treasury states that there is $7,294,000,000 in this country outside of the treasury vaults. This is the largest total of money in the hands of the people in the history of the nation. It is more than $600,000,000 above figure of a year ago. No matter how much money there is in one's pocket it won't end the depression until it is brought out of the pocket and put into circulation. The amount of money in the treasury vaults is more than twice as much as in circulation. President Hoover is the finance czar of the nation. He is the only man back to back.

Other people often criticize and find fault with the nation's people. We like to compare such people with any nation's people we know. The young people do have many mistakes and faults, but for every one that they have we can find two that are just as objectionable and just as open for criticism among the critics. The idea that when a man reaches a certain age that he should be excused for all carelessness, foolishness and objectionable habits, is a relic of the ignorant age.

The custom of many firms returning to employ men over 40 or 50 is wrong. The only basis of determining a man's value is his ability to do a job. Many men of fifty have more ability and are more efficient than many men many years younger. The mere fact that a man is young does not make him more efficient any more than the fact that he is old makes him less efficient.

CHEER IS NEEDED IN DINING ROOM

A good meal tastes better when eaten in the atmosphere of light and cheerfulness, and whatever type the dining room may be, it should above all be cheerful. Mrs. E. M. Cobb, home management specialist at the University of Maine, in discussing furniture for the dining room, she said: "The dining room may be in the end of the living room, it may be a separate room, or just a breakfast room. All of these types suggest different furniture and furnishings. If it is a separate room devoted only to dining, probably the traditional dining room furniture, consisting of table, chairs, buffet, and serving table, would be best arranged in a rather formal conventional manner. The charm of this type of dining room would depend more upon the details of its furnishings, such as curtains, rugs, lights, etc., in harmony with the furniture, rather than upon the furniture itself. If it is the 'dining room end' of a living room, it is less conventional. One likes to feel that it is difficult to tell when the living room leaves off and the dining room begins. For that reason, furniture that suggests a living room but at the same time fills the need of a dining room is most appropriate. Instead of the traditional dining room table, a drop leaf table, set against the wall, is not needed, might be used. A family of two could even manage with a gate leg table. A chest of drawers would be quite suitable than a sideboard in this dining room arrangement. Furthermore, it has good storage space for table linens and silverware. A secretary is attractive as well as useful for this living room dining room combination, as it supplies a writing desk, a case for books, and drawers for linens and silverware. The so-called 'breakfast room' may take on a queer character than the formal dining room. Painted furniture seems to suit this type particularly well, along with gay curtains and dishes."

Why Called "Warm Snow"
Speaking of snow in the winter, there is no such thing as warm snow, for cold or near freezing temperatures is necessary for it to retain its shape and color. In some parts of the world, however, white ashes, usually of volcanic origin, have been known to fall like snow and to accumulate in drifts which look like snow drifts, and retain this appearance until rain soaked or scattered by the wind. This is not snow, but is sometimes called "warm snow" because of its resemblance to snow.

Why Balloon Rises
A balloon rises because it is pushed up by the air, which is denser than the gas in the balloon. Therefore, only gases lighter than air can be employed. The higher the temperature the less is its lifting power, because density decreases with altitude. When a balloon has risen until its total weight equals that of the air it displaces it ceases to rise and becomes a floating body. Its diminishing weight—throwing out ballast—the balloon will go higher.

Why Name Is Not Used
It is the custom in the British parliament, as well as the United States congress, and, in fact, in all large deliberative bodies, to avoid the use of the personal name in debate or introduction. The original purpose of this was to avoid any possible breach of decorum and to prevent an individual, who might hold that his name had been slandered.

Why Dickens Was "Boo"
Charles Dickens first went under the pseudonym of "Boo." When asked to explain its origin, Dickens replied that he had a little brother who resembled so much the "Moose" in the "Victor of Waterfield" that he used to call him Moose. But a younger girl, who could not then articulate clearly, was in the habit of calling Moose, Boo or Bo.

WHY Autumn Brings Distinctive Coloring to Leaves

The chlorophyll which imparts the green color to nonparasitic vegetation is constantly produced under the influence of light. In autumn, when the tree's work of the year is done, its vitality decreases regardless of weather, and less chlorophyll is produced. Xanthophyll, which turns foliage yellow instead of green, is then produced in excess, for it is believed to be a decomposition product of chlorophyll. Those who have studied the mystery of the life of the leaf say that the autumn reds are of very different origin. The erythrophyll which causes the red coloration is not a decomposition product of chlorophyll but is present in the leaf all through the year. Normally, however, the chlorophyll green is so much more abundant than the erythrophyll red that the red is practically drowned out. But when in autumn the chlorophyll is diminished the erythrophyll becomes visible. Instead of being, like xanthophyll, a product of the autumn it has been in the leaf all summer waiting for its chance to make a showing. On the basis of this explanation, which I have taken from a scientific publication, it is clear that frost or the absence of frost is in no measure responsible for the autumn change. "C. T. B." in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why Pumpkins and Nuts Are Halloween Emblems

Halloween, which is the eve of All-hallows or All Saints' day, absorbed some of the customs formerly associated with the festival of Pomona, the Roman harvest feast, which fell about the first of November. This undoubtedly accounts for the popular association of pumpkins, fruits, nuts, grain and other products of the autumn with Halloween. Using pumpkin lanterns was probably borrowed from the Celts of Gaul and Britain who set aside one night each year after the harvest for feasting and making merry. Huge fires were built and the druids, the pagan priests, drank, ate and danced throughout the night. They used lanterns made of gourds and squashes to represent the various witches and hobgoblins associated with these pagan celebrations. —Exchange.

Why Fat Foams in Frying

When doughnuts are fried in oil or melted fat of any kind considerable moisture vapor—that is, water in vapor form—is given off. With this water certain water soluble substances are carried into the fat, which makes the surface of the fat sufficiently viscous to form a foam with the water which has been given off during the cooking of the doughnuts. The substance in one case may be water soluble proteins, such as albumin, which may come off as a result of use of eggs or from the flour itself. Anything which affects the surface tension of the fat to a point where it can be blown into bubbles will cause it to foam when the water vapor comes off during frying or cooking.

Speaking of snow in the winter, there is no such thing as warm snow, for cold or near freezing temperatures is necessary for it to retain its shape and color. In some parts of the world, however, white ashes, usually of volcanic origin, have been known to fall like snow and to accumulate in drifts which look like snow drifts, and retain this appearance until rain soaked or scattered by the wind. Why "Potter's Field"

Potter's field was the name given to the burial place of strangers in old Jerusalem. It has come down to modern times to mean the place in cemeteries where single graves are sold. A pauper's grave is one for which the deceased person's estate or family could not pay and the expense was borne by the church.
